I've been a career woman for the past seven years. For a couple of years after giving birth to my first daughter, it was really tough for me to work and take care of her at the same time. So I know how necessary the babysitting service you're providing is. And I feel really grateful for the service too. There is, however, one thing I'd like you to consider. Currently, a babysitter is taking care of my second daughter for eight hours from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For me, it would be much more useful if the service were available from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Could you be more flexible with your service? I'd really appreciate it.

People often don't consider purchasing boats, renting a beach house, or taking care of pool maintenance during the winter, but that's exactly when you should be looking for good deals on these things. Providers of those items or services are often less busy at those times. So you'll get a warmer reception than you would during the busy season when there's more demand. That doesn't mean you have to plan your vacation at the beach in December. But you are more likely to have a fruitful negotiation if you begin the discussion in the off-season.

Sports involve your brain as much as your body: you have to understand plays, see the field and know your next move, block out the crowd, and concentrate on your performance. You also need to control anxiety and negative thoughts. It takes practice to develop these mental skills, which is no different from the development of physical skills. Dr. Alan Goldberg, a sports psychologist, says that most performance problems that athletes struggle with are not a result of inadequate coaching or a lack of physical skills or technical ability. When the heat of competition is turned up, the individual performer or team that falls apart most often does so because of mental factors like poor concentration, negativity, lack of confidence, or an inability to let go of mistakes.

- ① the effects of physical training on team sports
- ② the characteristics of the best-performing athletes
- ③ the importance of controlling mental factors in sports
- ④ the necessity of encouraging each other during the game
- ⑤ how to build strong teamwork to win a sports competition

If you've ever visited a fortune-teller you probably came away amazed at the things they knew about you — things no one else could possibly have known. So it must be a supernatural power, right? Research into the fortune-telling business shows that fortune-tellers use a technique known as "cold reading," which can produce an accuracy of around 80 percent when "reading" a person you've never met. While it can appear magical to some people, it is simply a process based on the careful observation of body-language signals plus an understanding of human nature and a knowledge of probability statistics. It's a technique practiced by tarot-card readers, astrologers, and palm readers to gather information about a "client."

A 17-year-old patient sat in my counseling office some time ago and said, "I'm so tired of my father telling me that I don't live up to my potential. ① He says it about once a month." This young man is a typical product of a high-achieving father. His father is a physician who has a terrible time with both his employees and his children because ② he expects the same sort of drive in everyone else. ③ He is trying to inspire his son, but the result is defiance. Here is why. If the father says, "You have great potential," it is a compliment to ④ his talent, but it is quickly spoiled with the remark, "You don't live up to your potential." In the process ⑤ he has attacked his son's character.

* defiance: 반항, 저항

Whenever I look into my daughter Emily's face, I think about the power of fatherhood. Her face reminds me ① that I have given her more than just my name. Like me, she has freckles stretching across the bridge of her nose almost like a Band-Aid. The skin around her eyes ② form small and thin lines, and the lines match mine. "When Emily smiles," my mother tells me, "she looks just like you." Other things in her are reflections of me. I see myself most ③ clearly in her eyes, the windows to her soul. Like me, Emily has a drive ④ to succeed and will try anything. "Who needs to wait for instructions?" she used to tell ⑤ herself as she attempted to do the high bar in gymnastics class; more than once, she failed. Also, more than once, she succeeded.

It was once considered an amazing achievement to reach the summit of Mount Everest. It was even a national (A) disgrace/honor to have a climber waving a national flag there. But now that almost 4,000 people have reached its summit, the achievement means less than it did a half century ago. In 1963, six people reached the top, but in the spring of 2012, the summit was crowded with more than 500 people. Then what makes it (B) difficult/possible for so many people to reach the summit? One important factor is improved weather forecasting. In the past, (C) lack/presence of information led expeditions to attempt the summit whenever their team members were ready. Today, with hyper-accurate satellite forecasts, all teams know exactly when the weather will be perfect for climbing, and they often go for the top on the same days.

It is important to remember that a misunderstanding is never ended by an argument but by a ① sympathetic desire to see the other person's view. As Buddha said, "Hatred is never ended by hatred but by love." Here is an example: Pat Duffy was selling cars for General Motors. If a buyer made a ② positive remark about the car he was selling, Pat would get upset at the customer. He would talk back to the customer and ③ win lots of arguments, but he didn't sell many cars. Finally, he learned to handle the customers and here is how. If a customer said, "This GM car is no good! I would rather buy a Ford car," Pat, instead of arguing, said, "Ford cars are good, and it is a fine company." This made the customer ④ speechless. There was no room for argument. Now instead of wasting time arguing about Ford cars, Pat got off that subject and ⑤ concentrated on the GM cars he was selling.

27. Lydecker 형제에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

The brothers Howard and Theodore Lydecker were responsible for the wonderful special effects in movie serials made by Republic Pictures from the 1930s to the 1950s. They specialized in creating extremely realistic effects on very low budgets. Among the qualities that made their effects so believable were carefully constructed models and an insistence that their effects be created "in camera." This means that they were achieved during the original filming. Because the effects were shot simultaneously on the same film stock, the image quality was very high. The Lydeckers developed a technique for flying model aircraft that produced very realistic results. It gave them complete control over the movement of the aircraft and is still used today.

29. The biggest trap many family gardeners fall into is creating a garden that is too large. Even though you may have the best of intentions, over time a garden that is too large will become a maintenance nightmare. My family, like many others, eagerly planted large gardens only to cut back slowly on the time devoted to gardening. Sometime in September, we ended up with a garden full of overripened fruit and out-of-control, overgrown plants. This situation is not enjoyable for adult gardeners, let alone for children. Most children (and many adults) won't enjoy spending their warm sunny days tending an overgrown garden plot. When thinking about the size of your family garden, be _____. Plan the size according to the time your family can devote to the garden.

- ① diligent ② ambitious ③ realistic
- ④ challenging ⑤ cooperative

30. Compared to past generations, we are quite well off. In the past fifty years, the average buying power has more than tripled. We own a lot of electronic devices that are designed to make our lives easier, but still, as sociologists are eager to point out, there is no end to the list of things to do in our daily lives. We work as hard as our grandparents did, and the result is flawlessness but not freedom. The curtain edges are free of dirt, the picture hooks on the wall are firmly in place, and our eggs come out just the way we like them. The more we have, the more we want. The result is an apparent scarcity of time, a dilemma that seems to grow with each passing year, even though there is plenty of time to go around. _____ is the price we pay for an abundance of options. [3점]

- ① Feeling pressed for time
- ② Being exposed to danger
- ③ A widening generation gap
- ④ Boredom out of convenience
- ⑤ Economic imbalance among social groups

31. For the last 20 years, some educators have believed that children should not be allowed to experience failure. Educational situations were structured so that every child could be successful nearly all the time. It was reasoned that the experience of failure would discourage students from future study. In the field of science, however, finding out what does not work is as important as finding out what does. In fact, real advances in science tend to occur when _____. Although students should not be constantly faced with frustrating learning situations, a positive attitude toward failure may better serve them in developing problem-solving skills. After all, in much of scientific inquiry, there are no right or wrong answers. [3점]

- ① students are constantly motivated
- ② the chance of failure is minimized
- ③ various fields of studies are linked
- ④ solutions do not fit the predictions
- ⑤ a small achievement is not overlooked

32. A miser tries to save his money. But he is failing to utilize what he owns. If he were to realize how he is limiting his true wealth, he would hasten to find some worthy person or institution that would benefit from a portion of his fortune. The part that he gives away might seem to diminish the size of his fortune. However, in reality what he gives away remains his eternal possession. And the true size of his fortune is calculated by what he gives and not by what he keeps. Some people use the expression, "He is worth 'X' amount of money." They usually refer to a person's money and property that has not yet been given away. The expression would be more accurate if the calculations included _____ . [3점]

- ① the pleasure of saving money
- ② what one has donated to others
- ③ the current value of one's property
- ④ the money coming from investments
- ⑤ what one has lost from hasty decisions

33. Anyone who has ever achieved any degree of success knows that _____. Success is borne on the shoulders of commitment, discipline, and persistence. Yet our popular culture conveys a very different message to children: success doesn't have to be difficult or time consuming. Popular culture is full of stories about overnight successes, pills to lose weight fast, and "breakthrough" products to look ten years younger. Children see young actors such as Hilary Duff and Haley Joel Osment and musical geniuses like the violinist Sarah Chang, but they don't see the many years of determination, practice, and sacrifice that got them to the top of their professions. Children don't realize that overnight successes are usually ten years in the making. [3점]

- ① one person can make a big difference
- ② nothing in life worth having comes easily
- ③ people have to accept their children as they are
- ④ there's always another way to get something done
- ⑤ successful people are talented in many different fields

I'm not sure which one of us did the talking, but it must have been pretty convincing because Mr. Montague agreed to audition us the very next day. We couldn't believe it. We were shocked. Rehearsal was over for the day. After we stopped screaming and hugging and dancing around Jean's basement, I ran all the way home to tell Mom about our "lucky break." She was delighted, and she insisted on going with us to the audition, as much for support as to make sure everything was going smoothly. I felt like a little kid on Christmas Eve. In general, there are two major styles of practice when it comes to medicine. In the past, the relationship between the doctors and patients was mostly paternalistic. In other words, doctors acted in a “father knows best” fashion.

- (A) The doctor’s task in this case is not to tell what to do but to educate the patient about various treatment options. Ultimately, the doctor allows his patients to reach an informed decision about their own health conditions.
- (B) The other style of medical practice can be described as informative. As the paternalistic style slowly goes out of favor with the general public, the informative style is gradually taking hold as the more common type of doctor-patient relationship.
- (C) In this type of relationship, the doctor told what needed to be done, and the patient followed it without asking a lot of questions. This style of medicine allowed only for one-way communication.

But being good at chess isn’t a real measure of “intelligence.”

Do you think a computer is smarter than people? (①) In the case of chess, it has been proven that a computer can store and handle more bits of information about chess moves than a human brain can. (②) In fact, there are other board games that computers are pretty hopeless at. (③) For instance, in the complex board game Go, even the most advanced computers can’t beat beginners. (④) The same goes for complex card games like poker, which computers are not good at because they can’t bluff (or even cheat) the way human players do. (⑤) To play poker or Go well, you need other things like intuition and creativity.

We often spend our childhood years testing our physical limits by doing all kinds of team sports. When we become high school students, we go so far as to engage in two or three team sports. That’s because we have enough physical strength. By the time we reach adulthood, however, very few of us can compete at the elite level, even though more than half of us still enjoy playing sports. That is, we’re finding we’re not as physically strong as we used to be. Naturally, we move away from team sports requiring collision, such as football, soccer, or basketball, and toward sports that offer less risk of physical injury or stress on the body. Actually, many people turn to sports for individuals. Thus, team sports become more difficult to organize in an adult world.

The violent reality of war has a damaging effect on every level of our humanity—our bodies, our minds, and our spirits. Once I had the opportunity to live in Bethlehem, on the West Bank, for three years. During that time, I often traveled back and forth from Bethlehem to Jerusalem. On one trip, when the border was closed to Palestinians, I happened to arrive at a checkpoint at the same time as a young Palestinian woman. She was carrying a newborn, her first child, trying to take it to the hospital in Jerusalem.

The young mother appeared to be around nineteen years old, about the same age as the soldier who met her at the checkpoint. Her attempts to convince him to allow her to cross the border went from talking to pleading to crying.

Seeing the woman’s growing desperation, the soldier was obviously moved. It was clear that she was sincere in her attempt to take her child to the hospital. As the conversation grew more intense, I noticed that both the young mother and the equally young soldier began to cry together. It was sad to watch, as the soldier could only _____ her entry into Jerusalem even though it was completely against his wishes. I was struck by the pain and anguish that both of these young people endured because of the political situation.

R H Bing was a famous American mathematician. His full name, as recorded on his birth certificate, was R H Bing. (These were not initials, and there were no periods.) William Jaco was one of (a) his students at the University of Wisconsin in the 1960’s. In those days Bing had a great many students, and he once organized a trip to a mathematical event in Michigan.

(B)

Jaco was overwhelmed. He knew that the famous R H Bing was a great mathematician, but this was just too much. He told Bing how impressed he was. “Well,” said Bing, “I, too, heard the problem yesterday. And I, too, skipped dinner and the reception and stayed up all night thinking about it. (b) I just solved it half an hour ago.”

(C)

The only other person he found in the dining room was Bing himself, and Jaco sat down next to (c) him with an air of defeat. Bing asked him why he was up so early, and Jaco confessed that he had attacked this math question, which he related on the spot to Bing. Bing stared off into space for a while, scratched (d) his head, then grabbed up a napkin and wrote out a beautiful and elegant solution.

(D)

When they got there someone posed a math question that he had been saving up for the visiting mathematicians. Jaco was really interested in the question. He skipped the reception, skipped dinner, and stayed up all night thinking about the problem. He was determined to solve it and make Wisconsin proud. At 6:00 a.m. the following morning he had not solved it, and (e) he went somewhat disappointedly off to breakfast.
